ALTEGRIS ANNOUNCES THE PASSING OF JACK RIVKIN

La Jolla, Calif.—November 9, 2016—Altegris today announced, with great sadness, the passing of its CEO and Chief Investment Strategist, Jack Rivkin, following a courageous battle with cancer. Mr. Rivkin joined the firm in December 2013, serving as Chief Executive Officer and Chief Investment Strategist since February 2016, and Chief Investment Officer prior to that.

“As a trusted leader, respected spokesman and loyal friend, Jack made invaluable contributions to our firm, setting the foundation for future success,” said Matt Osborne, Co-Founder and Chief Investment Officer at Altegris. “We are honored to have had the opportunity to work with Jack and are thankful for his dedication. He will be greatly missed.”

Mr. Rivkin had a long and varied career in the investment industry across private and public equity, investment policy and management. With almost 50 years of investment research and asset class experience, Mr. Rivkin was known as a keen observer of investment and business strategy.

“Jack will be remembered for his unwavering commitment to our firm and industry, and love for his friends and family. Jack leaves an admirable legacy, as his skilled management, research and academic experience have left a lasting mark on our industry,” said Steven Spiegel, Co-Founder, Partner, and Principal at Aquiline Capital Management.

Mr. Rivkin was a key representative of Altegris in his role as CEO and Chief Investment Strategist, and member of the firm’s Investment Committee. Prior to joining the firm in 2013, Mr. Rivkin held several roles in the investment industry in his extensive career with Neuberger Berman, Citigroup Investments, and PaineWebber. He was the principal subject in a series of one of Harvard Business School’s most popular case studies, “Lehman Brothers: Rise of the Equity Research Department,” 2006.

Martin Beaulieu will assume the responsibility of CEO in addition to his responsibility as Executive Chairman, effective immediately.
